Information In Connection With Primaries

To Be Held By Both Parties Tuesday, May 17

When County Tickets Are To Be Nominated

Much Care Must Be Taken In Marking Ballot

As There Is No Such Thing As A Straight Ticket

Tuesday, May 17, is the day and date for the Democratic-Republican primary election.

At this election candidates for congressman and for all county offices except probate judge, will be nominated and those who are successful will be entitled to have their names printed on the ballots for the November election.

On this same day delegates and alternates to the Democratic and Republican county conventions, which will select delegates and alternates to the state, senatorial and judicial conventions, will be elected.

One committeeman will also be elected on this day in each precinct of the county by each of the parties, these men to compose the county central committees.

The voting places in the 38 precincts of Knox county will be opened and closed as at a regular November election, and each voting place will be officered by four judges and two clerks, as under the Australian system that has been in vogue now for many years.

In each voting place there will be Republican ballots and Democratic ballots, which will contain the names of candidates who qualified by filing petitions and declarations.

Republicans will be supplied with official ballots containing names of Republican candidates. Democratic ballots will have candidates of that party thereon. If no petitions were filed for any particular office, the ballots will contain blank spaces. This condition does not prevail in the county or district offices, but each party has a few "vacant" places for delegates and committeemen. In but two or three precincts will there be alternates on the ballot. These are on Republican ballots in the First ward, in Clinton township, and one name in Morris. There may be as many alternates as there are delegates, and these may be elected by writing names in the blank spaces and then properly marking with an X in the space at the left. This may also be done where no name appears for committeeman. It should be remembered in this connection that a name written upon a ballot should be that of a member of the party represented by the ballot itself. Otherwise the ballot would not be counted on that particular office. That is, if a Republican elector should write in the name of a Democrat and mark it properly the vote would not count. The reason for this is obvious. Otherwise it would be possible for Republicans to control Democratic nominations and vice versa. The law intends that the primaries shall be separate except that they are held at the same time and place and under the same supervision.

The marking of ballots at a primary election is an important matter. There is no such thing as a straight ticket. If an elector marks only in the space at the left of the first name on the ballot it will count for that candidate only. The elector should mark opposite the name of each candidate for whom he desires to vote. Care should be exercised also where there are more candidates than are to be nominated for the office under the title of which the names appear. For instance, each party has four candidates for members of the board of county commissioners. Three are to be nominated. If an elector in either party should happen to make X marks before all four names it would indicate no choice and none of the candidates for commissioner would benefit. It is very important that care should be exercised in the matter of marking the ballots, and electors who go to the polls on Tuesday should bear in mind these three facts:

(1) Republicans cannot participate in nominating Democrats, nor can Democrats vote for Republicans and expect to have the votes counted.

(2) There is no such thing as voting a straight ticket—each candidate must be voted for if there are not more candidates for a particular office than are to be nominated.
(3) Where there are more candidates for any office than are to be nominated only the number indicated to be nominated should be voted for.
Where there are blanks for delegates, alternates or committeemen electors may write in names if they desire to do so, but they must make an X in the space to the left just the same as though the name had been regularly presented to the election supervision and printed upon the ballot.
The whole process is simple if one reasons it out, but it is also true that if an elector does not "take his head into the booth with him" he is very likely to miss voting for some candidates for whom he fully intended to indicate a preference or for whom he expected to vote if there was no opposition on the ballot just to show his party loyalty.

FELL

Getting Out Of Buggy And Injured His Ankle

Mr. Orville Skeen of Wooster avenue met with a painful accident while climbing out of a buggy on West High street Monday afternoon at about four o'clock. Mr. Skeen stopped near the G. W. Lazear feed store just across the B. & O. railroad and was stepping on the step of the buggy when his foot slipped and he was thrown to the ground. In the fall, Mr. Skeen's right ankle was badly sprained and he was unable to walk. Dr. J. F. Lee was called to render surgical attention.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lemaster of Chesterville spent Tuesday in Fredericktown with relatives.
